MOST DIFFICULT TIMES FOR WORK CREDIT:

Thursday afternoons from 2 until 3 or 4, depending on the day. Also, if you have a particular talent, idea or peeve, please see a coordinator for setting up a special project. We love special projects! Some in the past have wrought beautiful new shelves, informational and durable signs, deep down cleanliness that gladdens the soul... YOU tell US! Watch this space in the following weeks, where we will continue to provide information about these changes.

From "Seeds of Deception" by Jeffrey Smith:

The now-defunct Arthur Anderson Consulting Group, of Enron fame, had asked Monsanto what their ideal future looked like. Monsanto responded that it would be "a world with 100 percent of all commercial seeds genetically modified and patented." Think of that -- no natural foods would be left, only those genetically engineered by scientists. No seed-saving or ownership of seeds by independent farmers, only corporations. No organic or non-GE conventional foods. Choices for consumers? Forget it -- you'll eat what they want you to eat.

Percy Schmeiser, a Canadian canola farmer who is fighting Monsanto over US patent law relating to seeds, will speak at 7 p.m. this Friday, Apr. 9, at Agate Hall (1787 Agate St., Eugene). His talk, David v. Goliath: U.S. Patent Law and the Might of Monsanto, will be followed by a reception. Admission is $5.00. Schmeiser's talk is the keynote of a one-day symposium titled Malthus, Mendel, and Monsanto: Intellectual Property and the Law and Politics of Global Food Supply. * More than 200 farmers, scientists, and legal scholars will discuss contentious questions about control and ownership of genetically modified crops. The symposium will explore how extending intellectual property rights to seeds affects farmers, and how recent Supreme Court decisions and new technologies threaten global food security and genetic diversity. For more information on the symposium AND TO REGISTER, see: <http://www.morsechair.uoregon.edu/MMM.php>.

*[*Thomas Robert Malthus was an English economist who theorized that world population tends to multiply faster than the food supply leading to disastrous results. Gregor Mendel was an Austrian monk known as the father of genetics. Monsanto is a multinational corporation that is developing and marketing genetically altered seeds.]*

Fire and Forests Roadshow to Save the Wild Siskiyou! Co-sponsored by the Siskiyou Project, Oxygen Collective and the Klamath-Siskiyou Wildlands Center raveling in a 40-foot biodiesel-powered bus, an energetic, creative troupe of activists, musicians and performers are traveling from Bellingham, Washington to Palo Alto, California to mobilize support for the permanent protection of the threatened Siskiyou Wild Rivers area. This world-class place in southwestern Oregon is threatened by Biscuit post-fire logging - the largest timber sale in the modern history of our national forests. The evening shows include performance, video, slideshows and songs by veteran activist and musician Peg Millet to amuse, amaze and inspire. We will explore the special qualities of the Siskiyou Wild Rivers area, fire ecology, fire politics, and examine the controversial Biscuit post-fire logging project. Ending with an empowering message of hope and a call to action, we guarantee you will have a good time. Bring your friends!
