DRY GOODS NOTES

new year, new things. we now have blue lotus chai in tins as well as the organic and traditional blends in bulk! mochi is back, we will usually have two flavors in stock at a time since we have to order by the case now, at least we can get it. after waiting and waiting for schack farms to resume deliveries of their eggs i gave up. we now have wilcox farms organic, veg fed, cage free access to outdoors eggs, i hope this meets with your approval. natural value tomato products have been in short supply so we are getting what is available. united is dropping roasted, salted og cashew pieces, or so they said this week. hummingbird has picked up roasted, salted og whole cashews which will be taking the place of the pieces. we can get og masa in bulk from earthly gourmet and will most likely have it next month.

i'm putting up a new requests list. there have been many requests for items we do not have a source for and so have not gotten them, others have listed websites or such for ordering items, this is difficult as we do not have a growers credit card (nor would i want us to). please, when requesting an item, tell me who the supplier is, thanks.

i want to give a big shout out to phil. azure has recently changed its delivery schedule, last week phil had to come to growers three time to accommodate the delivery and stocking. another shout out goes to laurie who has stepped back in to the world of dried fruits and nuts while elise is back east for family. volunteers like phil, laurie, isabella and many others help keep growers going, you can do this too.

that is all for now. may the horse be with you.
